The South and Its Cause. Time is doing something, though not great deal, to mellow Mr. Jefferson Davis Here is his latest, an extract from a lette declining an invitation to be present at the hat way sgain. The South is the burnt enild that dreads the fire. Besides, the South is getting along pretty well for a cripple. "The iron heel of deepotism" isn't on her neck, and nobody is grinding her in the dust. But she is getting a great deal of ing called my attention to it: good Northern money for the development of her resources and the employment of her people, and the shrewd Yankers are going to make money by their enterprise.

Mr. Davis is one of a few relics of the past who can't appreciate what is going on; who will not live long enough to realize who will not live long enough to realize that the South isn't making itself unhappy over the sovereignty of the States—that she is more concerned about earning a living, to say nothing of an occasional snug appropriation under the old flag.

The Farmers and the Woot Tariff.

The Wool Growers' Association of Ohio county has taken an important and practical step in betail of the restoration of the wool tariff of 1807. Demanding that act of justice, and determined if possible to secure it, they resolve to begin at the bottom and make themselves felf at the ballot box.

The wool growers declare that they will support no candidate for Congress, State Senate or House of Delegates who does not publicly pledge himself to use his in.

finence and his vote in behalf of a restored wool tariff. It is obvious why they will caption of the subject. The State Senator conserved with the subject. The State Senator conserved with the subject. The State Senator conserved with the subject. The State Senator Camden, Members of the House of Delegates are of less importance in this regard, and yet we have seen the West Virginia House of Delegates refuse to pass a resolution favoring this very wool measure. The farmers are right to insist upon having sll the moral influences they can command. A candidate who is not in sympathy with them on a matter which tonches them so deeply ought not to expect their support.

The stand so intelligently and boldly taken is another evidence that the wool growers are in earnest. They are a large element in West Virginia, and if they will stand together their demand will have rerespectful hearing wherever West Virginia has a voice.

The South still declaims against "contralization," "a paternal government," and "the subversion of the rights of the States," but that is more a matter of babit than of present conviction. In actual practice the South endorses every paternal act of the government, and the more of those acts the better she is pleased.

Mr. Davis needn't bother himself about vindicating the Leet Cause by force of arms. The people of the South sidewed their leaders, Mr. Davis among them, to drag them into one foll; no leaders could trick them hat way again. The South is the burnt

Sir:—The committee of Congress has reported $15,000 this year for improvement of the Monongabela river, above the Pennsylvania line. Two railroads are under construction, one on each side of the river, and it is contemplated to construct two bridges across the river. These bridges are to be built on grade with the roads on the bank, but little above high water mark, and it so built, they will be a bar to steam navigation.

and if so built, they will be a bar to steam navigation.

It is somebody's business to look after this matter. Should not our Sonators and Congressmen have the height of those bridges regulated by law, at the same time the height of the bridges fixed above low water on the Kanawha?

"O, we are gone to the devil!" says a southern representative with the same stamp on him, who not object to being an ornithorhynchus. "I can not see any salvation for us. Randall and his follows broke up our tariff programme, and now the extremists on our side are doing their best to raise a row at Chicago that may spilt us as wide as the Charleston convention did."

A great philosopher has observed that there is some grain of good in all things of evil. It appears from the foregoing that even the thing of evil that goes by the name of Democratic party is not without a grain of virtue—that is, not totally destitute of members that are not political gamblers. The declaration of the member from New York shows, or tends to show, that among the protectionists and the good-lord-and-good-davil hypocrites that compose the bulk of its active membership, there are a few men who are not inclined to invite the contenut of the weathen to the contenut of the weathen to the contenut of the weathen to invite the contenut of the weathen the charge in the contenut of the weathen to the contenut of the weathen to invite the contenut of the weathen to invite the bulk of its active membership, there are a few men who are not inclined to invite the contempt of the world any longer by trying to ride in opposite directions two horses tied together by the tails. These few righteous ones are worthy of applance, though there are hardly enough of them to avert the impending wrath of Heaven.
